Overview

Despite inflation data continuing to come in above expectations, some signs of weakening economic data led to hopes of a "Central Bank pivot", which would see the pace of interest rate rises slow. This caused markets to stage a rally in October, with the S&P500 finishing the month up +8.0%, the NASDAQ rallying +3.9%, the Nikkei 225 adding +6.4% and the FTSE100 lifting by +2.9%. The exception was the Chinese market, which fell -4.3%.

The Australian market was also strong in October, with the ASX300 Accumulation Index finishing the month up +6.0%. Financials (+12.1%) led the market higher, with the banking sector rallying into their results. The REITs (+9.9%) were also stronger, on the prospect of slowing interest rate rises, while Energy (+9.1%) rallied as the oil price rebounded. Consumer Discretionary (+8.8%) was also strong, with spending continuing to remain robust. Metals and Mining (-1.0%) was the worst performing sector, as most commodity prices fell on continued weak Chinese economic data and a lack of indications that their zero-COVID policy would change in the near term.

Looking forward, while activity remains strong, markets are increasingly pricing recessions in the US and Europe. Investors are searching for signs of slowing activity and easing inflationary pressures, which could foretell the end of the current rate tightening cycle. Economic activity in Australia continues to remain very robust, with low unemployment and resilient consumer spending despite interest rate rises and inflationary pressures. The course of the war in Ukraine and Chinese government policy will also have significant and unpredictable impacts on markets.

Fund Characteristics

The aim of the Trust is to grow the value of your investment over the long term by investing in a concentrated portfolio of Australian companies and to provide a total return that exceeds the S&P/ASX300 Accumulation Index measured on a rolling three-year basis.

Trust Review

The Trust returned +5.7%, after-fees in October, underperforming the index by -0.3%.

Holdings in the major banks outperformed, rallying an average of +14.2% over the month. This strong performance was sparked by the Bank of Queensland result, which showed a larger than expected benefit to margins from rising interest rates. This was also a characteristic of the ANZ result and is expected to be repeated when NAB and Westpac report in early November. The ANZ result also highlighted that credit quality remains very strong, with no signs of stress at present, consistent with the ongoing strength in the Australian economy.

While the revenue environment for the banks is the best it has been in a very long time, margins are likely to come under pressure again as funding costs rise. The ANZ result also highlighted the cost pressures that the banks are facing, particularly in terms of wage increases. Finally, it is likely that there will be an increase in bad debts from the current very low levels, as interest rate rises flow through the economy. After decreasing holding during the month, the Trust now holds a neutral position in the sector, with overweights in ANZ (+12.1%) and Westpac (+16.8%), which has significant upside should its turnaround be successful. This is offset by underweights in NAB.

Macquarie Group (+11.0%), outperformed, due to a combination of its high market beta and the delivery of a very strong half-year result. Of note, the high level of volatility has led to very strong results from their Commodities and Global Markets business. In particular, the energy trading business has benefited from dislocations in the global gas markets, which have driven strong trading profits, as well as high levels of customer demand for hedging products. The asset management business continues to grow, with strong demand for green energy investments. Macquarie is uniquely placed to meet this demand, with their expertise in originating and developing renewable energy projects.

Detractors over the month were the Trust's Resources holdings. While the Energy sector was stronger, on a rally in the oil price, declines in the prices of key commodities such as iron ore and copper, saw BHP (-3.0%), and Iluka Resources (-4.5%) lower. This resulted from disappointment that the Chinese Party Congress gave no indication of significant new stimulus measures or an easing of the COVID-zero policy. In our view, it is only a matter of time until this occurs, and we remain positive on the outlook for commodities medium-term.

Trust Activity

During the month we added Macquarie Group to our holdings. At month end, stock numbers were 17 and cash was 3.2%.

Outlook

Global growth is clearly slowing, as interest rates rise and economies grapple with the impacts of high inflation and energy supply problems. However, we believe that this will be offset to some extent by the benefits to economies as COVID disruptions continue to recede. While economic data is mixed, and varies greatly from region to region, unemployment rates are very low in most major markets. The Australian economy is performing particularly strongly and will continue to be a key beneficiary of the strength in commodity markets. However, there are a number of potentially significant changes in the global economic and political backdrop, from the return of inflation and the change in the interest rate cycle, to rising geopolitical tensions. As a result, the level of uncertainty is elevated, and a degree of caution is warranted.

This view is expressed in the portfolio through holding a combination of stocks with reopening leverage, as well as stocks with solid defensive characteristics. Importantly, the portfolio is positively leveraged to post-COVID reopening, higher inflation, and rising interest rates. Within the cyclical part of the portfolio, this is achieved through overweight positions in the Financials, as well as select parts of the Consumer Discretionary sector and Resources sectors. In the defensive part of the portfolio, this is achieved through holdings in the sectors such as Telcos, Healthcare and a modest overweight in gold.
